"UNSAID will really make you think about the relationship between people and animals. I was not able to put it down, and I read parts of it twice." Temple Grandin, author of Animals Make Us Human Rarely has a novel captured so movingly the deep bonds between people and the animals that share their lives. Neil Abramson's poignant novel, Unsaid, is told by Helena Colden, 37, a veterinarian who recently died of cancer. Her lawyer husband, David, is left with the care of his wife's animals: three dogs, six cats, two horses and a pig. The animals were her passion, but David feels an obligation to carry on with their lives.

Unsaid by Neil Abramson is more than just a novel. It is a character study of the human condition. It examines how life, lives and loss can impact that condition and how ultimately it can lead us to a place of true healing. In fact, things like what happen in this book happen around the country--around the world--every single day, 4/5.

Rated 5 out of 5 by mitchmaz from Unsaid I loved this book. It made me smile, cry, and really made me think about a lot of tough topics. It made me smile, cry, . THINGS UNSAID, by Diana Y. Paul, is a novel that could be a memoir. It is the universal story of a dysfunctional family, how they tear each other apart, and how if not stopped, their instability could bleed down through generations to come. Things Unsaid is truly an apt name for the book. I found that I have my own things unsaid to deal with in my own life. I can honestly say this book got me thinking about things I /5(4). Unsaid delves into the reflections / arrogance of how humanity pits itself against each other and the beautiful creatures that are forced to survive around us.
