[Darrell Delamaide] -- "With the end of the Cold War, Europe has become the great question mark and most puzzling paradox of the emerging new world order. On one hand, the steamroller drive toward European unity is. An engaging look at Europe's economic prospects, forcefully demonstrating that the continent's future will depend on furthering regional alliances that transcend outmoded and restrictive national boundaries. He believes that Europe has formed itself into eight "superregions" and two special districts that act as "capital cities" of power and money. These alliances have been in some ways formalized. He believes additional alliances need to be established and recognized for the . He then creates a new map of Europe depicting eight "superregions." The solidarity and cooperation of these groups will allow the "superregions" to be autonomous, enabling them to determine the future development of Europe.
