The Picts were a confederation of peoples who lived in what is today eastern and northern Scotland during the Late Iron Age and Early Medieval periods. Where they lived and what their culture was like can be inferred from the geographical distribution of Brittonic place name elements, and Pictish stones.

The Picts took part in one of the most decisive battles in Scottish history - the Battle of Dun Nechtain (Dunnichen). If the Picts had lost, Scotland might never have existed. The King of the Scots wasn't particularly well liked by Picts, but he had married a Pictish Princess, and the Kings had agreed that the threat of the Angles from the south was too great to ignore. The battle waged and King Aedan was resoundly defeated, his two sons killed, and he disappeared from history.

These carved stone slabs are the only record the Picts left of their history; the rest of their story is told by later Roman, Scottish, and English writers. McHardy credits the Picts with building the megalithic structures (such as the Ness of Brodgar), which can still be seen in Scotland in the present day (33). Who were the Picts? From the accounts of Britain made by the classical authors, we know that by the fourth century AD, the predominant people in northern Scotland were referred to as "Picts". Throughout history, these Picts have been shadowy, enigmatic figures. The Picts were an amalgam of tribes who lived in the eastern and north eastern regions of Scotland during the ancient and early medieval period. Learn more.

Ellen Lloyd - hecfran-modelismo.com - Not much is known about the mysterious Picts and yet, they played a vital role in the history of hecfran-modelismo.com brave and determined people repelled the conquests of both Romans and Angles and won one of the most important battles in Scottish history.
